Working with youth is an intensely creative endeavour demanding a high level of improvisation - and the arts can be one of your greatest allies. This two-day intensive training is designed for youth workers, artists, teachers, and other adults, and is based on the belief that you don't have to be a professional artist to use the arts in working with young people.

You will learn powerful arts-based techniques to help youth increase their emotional literacy and capacity for self-expression. And in the process, you'll discover how your own creativity can sustain you in your life and work. This is a two-day workshop lead by Rupinder Singh Sidhu and Sara Kendall, two of Vancouver's most experienced and dedicated youth-oriented facilitators, both of whom are Hip Hop and multi-disciplinary performance artists.

Anyone who wants to enhance their skills in using creativity based learning in their programs is welcome in this training.

Power of Hope's unique model of group facilitation combines a deep understanding of group process with a keen awareness of the role creative expression plays in bringing individuals and groups alive. Our trainings provide best practices based on over a decade of leading model programs and conferences for multicultural groups of teens and adults.
