

Following the huge response we've had to the ipisi magazine concept, we urgently need more volunteers to help coordinate and create both web- and print- based materials. It's all done remotely, there's usually no need to go further than an internet connection, so come on in and get involved by emailing us with responses to the following;

- Who are you, and what can you bring to the project? (enthusiasm counts)
- Why do you want to be involved; and be creative about it!
- Of the positions described below, which one do you want to make yours; if none, feel free to suggest what you could do instead.

Lead Writers

Have your name up in stars, or in this case, bold, just below the heading. We need writers with flair and creativity to turn facts, figures and ideas into engaging and stimulating material. This job includes both writing your own material, and collating information on topics already assigned.

Graphic Designers

Do you spend endless hours in Illustrator and Photoshop, designing, drawing and playing? If so, we want you to help us design the graphical layout of both web and print material. Here, the keys are vision and clarity - have a concept, and make it real.

Web Gurus

If html, xml and php are languages you can talk, come on down and help us develop a more interactive website. We're looking to create something that is dynamic and open-ended, involving people in our vision, rather than just telling them about it.

Project Researchers

Are you the person everyone comes to for answers? If useless facts picked up from obscure references fill your mind, you can help ipisi to collate and discover the best resources out there, with you being the first to know about them. Working in conjunction with lead writers, you'll be at the forefront creating the involving material that makes us different.

We're well on the way to collating the material for our pilot edition, due to be released on April 28, and in your hands by May 5. We're after as many energetic young people as possible to jump on board before then so that we can make the pilot the start of something great.
